The vow is uttered; now, as man and wife. They turn to meet the gathering cares of life; When oft the husband hopeless deems the present state,
The wife still comforts, and, with sont elate
And eyes uplifted, trusts the heavenly aid,
While thro' her tears she whispers, "Love, be not atraid."

The shadows fall, the parting-hour draws nigh, And 'round the dying-bed they gather weepingly: With bitter tears all eyes are brimming o'er, As Love laments what Love shall clasp no more. But even here, while sobs the last farewell, And ever nearer sounds Death's passing-bell, The eyes grow bright, Hope triumphs over pain, And 'ini dher tears Faith murmurs, "We shall meet again."

[For the Dispatch.] Woman's Love. Men (annot love as women do. They may Be all devotedness, and seem to live And breathe but in the idol's sight: may look On all things she has touched as sanctified; May think of her all day, dram all the night her fair face and her remembered voice; feverish-maddened into jealousy Re feverish-maddened into jealousy
If she have but a smile that is not theirs;
May be lured back to tenderness again
By a kind word; may linger on her steps,
Hang on her smiles; but still they cannot love
As women do. Their love is but a dream— Hang on her smiles; but still they cannot love
As women do. Their love is but a dream—
A witchery—an enchantment; and it dies,
Leaving, perchance, some little lingering light
On the horizon of their thoughts, but not
The clory and the beauty of its dawn!
But hers! if it be dreamy, never dream
Had such reality. It doth imbue
The very essence of her life—dothringe
Her heart, her soul, her deeds, her words, doth clothe
Its object with all radiance, and then worship
The giory it hath made: it doth endure
As a fixed star, that sets not. 'Tis her world:
Time cannot change it—it defleth time—
Sorrow doth fail to dim it—like the fire
That burns the brighter for some sprinkled drops, sorrow doth fail to dim it—like the fire
That burns the brighter for some sprinkled drops,
Tears do but feed its fiame. Neglect, unkindness,
They only prove its truth. Would th's mooth check
Be pale and withered—the rich hair turn gray—
The lip be parched and fevered—the eve dim
In the neglected—if her love could die?

Verses Copied from Steamer "Dictator," from Savannah to Charleston, written beneath a frame containing a Confederate Treasury Note. [Published by request.]

And nought in the waters below it;
As the pledge of a nation that's passed away,
Keep it, dear friend, and show it—
Show it to those who will lend an ear
To the tale this trifle will tell,
Of Liberty, born of a patriot's dream,
Of a storm cradled nation that fell. Of a storm-cradled nation that fell.

Too poor to possess the precious ores,
Too much of a stranger to borrow,
We issued to-day our "promise to pay,"
And hoped to redeem on the morrow.
The days rolled on and washe bearing. The days rolled on, and weeks became years But our coffers were empty still; Coin was so scarce that the Treasury quaked If a copper but dropped in the till. But the faith that was in us was strong, indeed,

Though our poverty well we discerned,
And this little check represents the pay
That our suffering veterans earned.
They knew it had hardly a value in gold,
Yet as gold our soldlers received it;
It gazed in their eyes with a promise to pay,
And every true soldier believed it. 200 But our boys thought little of price or pay,

But our boys thought fittle of price or pay Or of bills that were overdue:
We knew if it bought our bread to-day
It was all our poor country could do.
Keep it! it tells our history o'er,
From the birth of the dream to its last;
Modest, and born of the angel Hope,
Like our hopes of success—it passed.

Confounded. My guide to woe! thy practiced art, O, trace, And see thy guilt impressed in my disgrace! From lofty heights I've dropped through love of thee And now, remorseful, from their sight I flee,

Thou false, degenerate one!
Thy loathful sight is frenzy to mine eye!
Art silent? Then remorse is born. Nay, nav, not born; nor sorrow for my fallen cry.

[For the Dispatch.]

In spring thou wooed'st, in autumn wooed'st anew, And linger'd oft thy sweetest charms to strew; While love, warm love, thy syren voice distilled; Thus fervent guidance urged thy wish fulfilled, O skilled in arts infernal! I'm shackled in thy bonds of bitter gall!
Art silent? For thy sins lamenting,
Or rousing Stygian throngs to aggravate my thrall!

Thy livid heart has changed my blushing cheek, Thy livid heart has changed my blushing cheek,
And vistas bright to prospects coldly bleak.
Thou honored'st once with ardent shake to greet,
But now from me thy faithless steps retreat.
O, fiendful, flendful foe!
Ingrained as thou, I cannot choose but hate!
Art silent? Ah, a sigh awakes!
Alas! to mourn through friendless clay "Too late,
too late!"

Replete with grief were happier hours, so dear, When turned mine ear thy poison'd vow to hear. Thy honor—ay, thy honor—hell defines, And Lethe seems to flow in thy confines.

Thou false, contemptuous one!

A harvest thou hast reaped in life's bleak vale!

Art silent? Yea, with flendish joy!

Away, begone, and seek not mirth from sorrow's wail!

RICHMOND, VA., March 27, 1878. Editors Dispatch: If the following translation from Goethe is worthy of publication "Gluck und Traum."

Oft in dreams thou hast seen us Together to the altar go, Thou as woman, I as man. Oft in unsuspecting moments I have stolen precious kisses. So every one can steal a kiss. The brightest fortune that we knew,

The bliss of happy, happy hours, With the moments passed away. What is left of that enjoyed? Just as dreams the kisses flew, With the kisses all the joy. "EGMONT." [For the Dispatch.]

A rose, a sweet rose just budding to view, Like a spirit of light, on the bush where it grew; Is it mine, is it thine, or whose shall it be? Come tell us, sweet rose, for thy choice is free. Ever fresh may you bloom, whosoever you are, Venus of roses, their bright morning star; Venus of roses, their bright morning star;
In the changes of seasons and fortune still bloom,
Reflecting sweet fragrance e'en over the tomb;
Great spirit of mercy and love ever shield
In the shade of thy wings this sweet gem of the field,
Not that it is mine, or it ever can be—
In choosing an owner its choice is free,
And that choice, I'm certain, will not fall on me;
How gladly I'd pluck it and wear it as mine,
Ever guarding its petals with a love that is blind;
When the winds should blow cold and flowers depart,
Like the spirit of rest, it should sleep on my heart.
Enchantment controls me, I know I am blind;
'Tis folly, 'tis madness, thus wildly to pine,
To sigh for the rose that can never be mine.
